PAKISTAN: Islamabad is alarmed at the extent of guerrilla activity in East Pakistan, particularly attacks against communications and transport facilities.

[redacted] attacks on bridges--the main target--have been successful enough to force the government to arrange for shipping additional bridging equipment from West Pakistan. [redacted] an average of two bridges a day are blown up. A noticeable increase in mines and booby traps is delaying troops and supplies traveling by road, and ambushes of troops moving by boat are becoming more effective. [redacted] the army is suffering about 18 casualties a day.

[redacted] The guerrillas are steadily improving their capabilities, but it seems unlikely that they would be ready for more than a stepped-up campaign of terrorism and sabotage by that time.

[redacted] There are now three divisions in the east, two of which were sent after fighting broke out in late March.
